Daniel Boone

Some years ago, for several years, Mr. Fess Parker was Davy Crockett—of which he now says, “Those fellers warn’t jes’ book heroes to me. They war real an’ they war mah real frien’s.” Then, after a brief go at Mr. Smith Goes to Washington—of which he now says, “There war jes’ too many char-a-ters”—Fess came back this season with Daniel Boone, a show which comes complete with the song: “What a boon, what a doer/ What a dream com’a truer . . .”

Wal, we’d like to fess up to Fess, who is obviously a likable fellow, that his dreams have com’a truer, but frankly we feel they’ve still got a fur piece to go. If you’re a small child, and you love Westerns, and you haven’t got anything else to do, you’ll just about be able to stand it. Otherwise, beware’. We can say two things for Mr. Parker as an actor: (1) He can keep up with the dialog. (2) He can out-act the Indians. Neither of these feats is extraordinary. In fact, taking them one by one, the only passable explanation for the dialog in this show is that it was written by writers who live in canyons—the echo technique whereby every question is asked and then reasked, answered and then reanswered, is carried to almost maddening extremes. As for the Indians, they are actually fascinating in their ineptitude. They play almost every scene as if someone had just told them they were not going to be paid after all.

As for other char-a-ters, Dan’l has a fam’ly which includes his wife Rebecca (Patricia Blair), who incidentally seems to us to be Mrs. cast; a daughter, Jemima (Veronica Cartwright); and a son named Israel (Darby Hinton). Dan’l also has a friend, Mingo (Ed Ames), who is half Cherokee but is Oxford-educated to make up for it. All in all, the good guys on this show are such bad actors that one way we have found to enjoy it is to root for the bad guys, who are, at least sometimes, good actors. This isn’t a foolproof method, however. One recent show, for example, guest-starred Edward Binns, who, though good, could not save a show which involved the theft of a doll from an Indian girl who was carrying it around because she had lost her baby. The Indian girl, incidentally, played the whole show singing something which sounded to us like Na-ka-mean and which she intoned over and over. Our theory is she was prerecorded.

Another episode—and incidentally the best we’ve seen, if for no other reason because it at least had an idea for a plot—was called “The Sisters O’Hannrahan.” In this, Dan’l, by mistake, finds he has bought at auction two indentured Irish serving girls, but when he brings them home and Mrs. Boone gets a look at them, there is nothing but trouble. There is apparently nothing the Hollywood writer thinks the American public likes better than having its folk heroes pictured as having the same domestic problems it does—but frankly the idea of Dan’l Boone being hen-pecked seemed to us the last straw. What a dream com’a askewer!

as we see it

■ What's needed is less frivolity, more serious drama. But the audience won't support anything that isn't light and frothy. They just don't want to get involved. As a result, generally the season was quite poor.

The above has nothing whatever to do with television. It's the consensus of what New York critics said about the past Broadway stage season.

■ Variety, the show-business paper, rounded up the views of newspaper and magazine critics who termed the season "bad," "impossible," "subpar," "routine" and "precarious."

Said Ted Kalem of Time: "What was particularly saddening was to see that a serious theatergoing public exists only as a self-proclaimed myth. . . . The audience that does exist is apparently too old, too passive, and too frivolity-minded to wish to be emotionally or intellectually engaged with any degree of seriousness."

Said Henry Hewes of the Saturday Review: "The dominance of musicals and comedies is the logical result of reading the financial balance sheet for the past three seasons when only one serious play made a lot of money and only four finished in the black."

Said Norman Nadel of the New York World-Telegram: "Actually the public, which rejected almost every straight and thoughtful play that was offered, is in a more frightening state than the theater, which offered some drama of value."

■ Aren't these the same complaints television critics have about their medium? The only real difference is that the theater critics blame the audience while television critics blame the networks. But the basic complaint is the same—too much frivolity.

If anything, we suspect that the theater critics are more realistic. The audience, whether it be buying tickets or tuning dials, is responsible for what it sees.

Two $595⁰⁰ commercial art scholarships awarded

First 51 runners-up receive $5 cash prizes

This year Art Instruction Schools celebrates its 51st Anniversary of service to the commercial art world. Since our beginning in 1914 more professional commercial artists have received training in art from our school than from any other art school in the world.

To celebrate our 51st Anniversary we offer this dual scholarship award, plus 51 cash prizes.

All you do to enter is draw either or both of the girls, in pencil, larger or smaller than the above sketches. If you win one of the scholarship prizes, you receive a complete course in commercial art taught by America's largest home study art school, Art Instruction Schools.

Our staff of instructors will select the next 51 most promising entries and award each a $5.00 cash prize.

Even those who do not win receive a professional estimate of their talents without cost.

Entries for the 51st Anniversary Talent Contest must be in before September 30, 1965. None can be returned. Our students and professional artists are not eligible. Start your drawing now and mail your entry right away.

EVERYTHING'S NEW BUT THE CAR

Gene Barry will spend next season abroad, hunting spies

BY PETER BOGDANOVICH

The new Amos Burke poses with a couple of the old props.

Television, a medium famous for its daring and originality, is trying something new—to television, that is. It all started back in the Thirties with those Alfred Hitchcock movie thrillers that mixed murder, sex and comedy so delightfully well. Many years later, after President John Kennedy had made Ian Fleming respectable reading, “Dr. No” was produced, followed in annual (and increasingly popular) blasts by “From Russia with Love” and “Goldfinger”; and a score of lesser imitations of the old Hitchcock formula, spiced with the addition of that peculiarly 20th-century marvel, the gadget. Secret-agent James Bond and his various counterfeits owe something as well to the hard-boiled school of detective fiction as written by Dash-ell Hammett (Sam Spade) and Raymond Chandler (Philip Marlowe). The difference is that the heroes now wear well-tailored tuxedos instead of felt hats and ready-made suits.

And so, with at least three decades of ancestors, the TV Bonds are born. Besides The Man from U.N.C.L.E. (an early birth in the trend) and Secret Agent, next season will usher in, among others, The Wild, Wild West (a James Bond Western, in which the star rides about in a plush railroad car); Honey West (a glamorous lady detective who practices karate on her villains); I Spy (We Spy would be more accurate, since Robert Culp will be aided by Bill Cosby); and, after two seasons as the richest cop in the world, Amos Burke is firing his chauffeur, leaving Gary Conway and Regis Toomey to mind the squad room, and joining the Government as Amos Burke, Secret Agent.

According to Tom McDermott (president of Four Star Television), a harried but confident man who acts as though he hasn't taken a deep breath in 20 years, the idea for the show's switch to Channel 007 originated with ABC in New York. The network officials felt the show was running “out of gas” in its present format, and that drastic revisions were necessary. McDermott denies that the success of The Man from U.N.C.L.E. was a deciding factor. “The last time I saw U.N.C.L.E.,” says McDermott with a sly smile, “they looked like they were doing Burke's Law.” The new show will be “more realistic and hard-hitting” than U.N.C.L.E., he maintains, adding, “They're a little more Mickey Mouse than we'll be.”

Don Weis, a talented film and television director, who did nearly a third of the Burke episodes the first year, says pragmatically: “If this got the show picked up, then it needed a change.” He also thinks, however, that Gene Barry is “the compelling force” of the series, and the main reason for its success to date. “I've always felt that about TV,” the director continued, “that it was the one personality which made people watch. Women like Gene, and every man would like all those girls falling all over him. And you believe it with Gene.” Weis grinned. “He believes it too.”

The girl-play will remain in the refurbished series. As Barry explains, predictably, “I'd be a very unhappy man without it.” The star is relieved to be “out of the police department,” to have “the world as my beat,” and to be “involved personally in the crimes. Instead of my being out to get them, they'll be out to get me.”

Burke's character, however, will not be altered, nor will what Barry grandiloquently calls “the champagne and bubble” of the style. Like McDermott, he hopes to be different from U.N.C.L.E. “My son Fredric, who's 12,” he explains, “watches U.N.C.L.E. avidly, and from what he tells me they are appealing to a younger type of audience. We're an adult show, and next year we'll be more adult—no gimmickry for the sake of gimmickry—strong stories that will grip you.”

Barry has dedication; he believes in his product. “I have always thought we were unique," he says with sincerity, just as though he'd never seen a Cary Grant movie. "We made TV history, and now the time is ripe to enlarge the format of the show."

The main burden of the enlarging falls on two men, Aaron Spelling (the producer) and Marc Brandel, the head writer whom Spelling brought from England to write and supervise scripts for the revised series. A soft-spoken, red-haired Englishman who wears lightly colored prescription sunglasses, Brandel is one of the few people one meets in television who seems genuinely to enjoy his work, without deceiving himself about the originality of its concept.

It's the Hitchcock thing

"To do a kind of Bond show has always interested me," he explained. "It really is the old Hitchcock thing, isn't it? The thriller with the element of humor. The point of the change is that now Burke gets involved, he sweats and bleeds and hates," Brandel went on, gingerly touching one of the two Band-aids he had on his face ("I had an argument with a swimming pool"). "Before, he just walked through the shows, and at first it had a freshness, but that couldn't be sustained. The new show is quite close to being an anthology in its elasticity—there'll be no set pattern, as there was before—and we do want to keep a firm hold on reality. If there's an assassination plot, it won't be 'a certain head of state,' it'll be De Gaulle, as it is in one of our stories. Or if someone is going to be kidnapped, it'll be Khrushchev, as we also have set."

Generally, though, the writer said the series would avoid "Iron Curtain stories" and similar "political plots," that "the heavies will be individuals, in the Goldfinger tradition. I hope we will be remembered for our heavies, as much as for Burke."

The idea also is to stay away from too many gimmicks. "We don't want him to be a walking electronic man," Brandel said. "The show should retain its humor, a sense of outrage. Not the one-line jokes—everyone's fed up with them—but a kind of cool, ironic, involved Burke." The writer is firm, too, on the show's lack of social consciousness. "I've never been a big message person," he remarked, "and have always enjoyed writing entertainment. I don't identify much with causes, and I shy away from telling people what to think."

Aaron Spelling, a thin, haggard-faced but youthful man, sat in a surprisingly small office at Four Star, behind a desk on which stood one of those giant erasers, the kind that reads: "I Never Make Big Mistakes"; also a little sign saying: "It's Hard To Be Humble When You're As Great As I Am."

They'll avoid Mickey Mouse

In a faint Texas accent, the producer explained one of his main objectives for the coming season. "We want to keep the show on a high plane, and stay away from the Mickey Mouse situation," he said, using what appears to be a favorite Four Star expression. "We won't have Burke pull out a tooth and throw a bomb. We hope to be more cerebral than that. We're gonna do stories that are fantastic, bigger-than-life, but plausible. We've got one about a guy who plans to rob New York, and another where a fellow blackmails the United States—and gets away with it."

Spelling went on, enthusiastically detailing various actual CIA devices which almost exceed the science-fictional imagination. Apropos of this, he called in Eddie Applegate, head of the studio's prop department, to show off a couple of Burke gadgets—specifically, a lighter and lipstick that combine into a pistol.

Applegate remarked that he was leery about a bit in which a woman's pearl earring becomes a bullet, but Spelling assured him of its effectiveness, and the man left, taking the cleverly improvised little weapon with him. "We're going to keep within Burke's sophistication," he repeated. "Can't be too Mickey Mouse. I can't stand scenes where someone walks into a delicatessen and the guy picks up a baloney which opens a secret door to this fantastically modern headquarters."

His boss: The Man

The only other regular on Amos Burke, Secret Agent will be Barry's superior, a person known simply as The Man, who apparently lives in and operates from a magnificently appointed plane that circles eternally high above the clouds. ("I asked a former CIA agent the safest place to be, and he said in the air.")

This agent also suggested a device with which The Man, by simply pressing a little button under the arm of his chair, could blow up the entire plane. But Spelling told them he didn't want to go that Mickey Mouse. "We look for that tongue-in-cheek quality. For example, one of our villains lives in a castle guarded by a vicious dog. So I had the idea, instead of trying to lure him away with a big, juicy steak, Burke drives up in his Rolls, opens the door, and out steps this beautiful girl dog."

Lying near Spelling on a long blue couch was a large, black German shepherd, named Adam. He is extremely friendly, but Spelling, his tongue in place, is sending him to a school where Adam will be taught to growl. After all, who ever heard of a Bonded producer with a dog that just licks your hand?

LOOKING FOR A PEARL PEELER?

The first thing you do is call that fellow Kellam de Forest

You may not, of course, ever want to have a pearl peeled. But if you were producing The Richard Boone Show episode called "Sorofino's Treasure," a story that called for 40 minutes of progressive pearl peeling, you would need an expert on the subject right away. And the yellow pages wouldn't help a bit.

What would help, and did, was calling a young man named Kellam de Forest. (He boasts a distant-cousin relationship to Lee De Forest, inventor of the basic radio amplifier tube.) In a matter of three days De Forest, a rather inventive man himself, had located a gemmologist at a museum who knew someone who knew exactly how to peel a pearl. And what's more, how to put together a plastic replica of the huge pearl called for in the script.

Located in a musty upstairs office at Desilu Studios in Hollywood, Kelam de Forest Research Service serves independent TV production companies, individual writers and almost anyone who can pay the price and wants to know more about a subject than their local libraries can supply. In the past 12 years the service has researched for shows ranging from I Love Lucy to Profiles in Courage.

In De Forest's office some 5000 volumes are stacked in dusty semiorder up to the two-story-high ceiling, and titles run the gamut from "The History of Orgies" to Dr. Spock's "Common Sense Book of Baby and Child Care."

Back in 1950 De Forest was hired to do research for a National Safety Council film, and was amazed at the number of separate sources he had to consult for the needed information. Exploring a bit more, he discovered that, while the major TV networks had their own research departments, the independent producers of TV shows couldn't afford extensive libraries or research personnel. So he set up his research outfit, operating out of his own living room, with himself as the total personnel. One of his clients was Desilu Productions; and when that company purchased RKO studios in Hollywood he set up his service there, leasing the contents of the former RKO library, adding to it his own collection of source materials.

A Yale University graduate in history, De Forest takes great joy in pinpointing authenticity for authenticity's sake. But if the joys of pure accuracy don't convince TV producers of the need for his services, the following type of headline may: from the Los Angeles Times of April 1—"Doctor Sues 'Kildare' Show, Asks $5 Million." The suit involved a Dr. Kildare episode in which a doctor, operating a small community hospital, is responsible for the death of a child, and later tries to hide his responsibility. The fictional doctor's last name was the same as that of the suing doctor, who also is on the staff of a small community hospital. He sued for five million dollars, claiming he was held up to "scorn and ridicule and suffered loss of patients and injury to his career." A simple name change might have saved Kildare a law suit.

Not that De Forest guarantees protection from law suits, but in researching for some 40 TV series, he checks names with a dedication well worthy of a Yale scholar.

There was The Bing Crosby Show about a professor who moonlighted as a jazz pianist. The name was originally Herman Schneider. A check revealed there was a jazz pianist called Herman the Hermit Schneider. The name was changed. The Fugitive keeps De Forest busy checking names. As David Jansen moves from town to town, new information is needed—on local police procedures, customs and, importantly, a check of all names against those in the phone books.

Historical shows involve the most research—accuracy of dates, names, modes of speech, types of clothes and personal habits of historical characters. Profiles in Courage, even with basic historical research handled by historian Allan Nevins, was an exhausting job. An episode titled "Richard T. Ely," set in the late 1800's, involved 54 separate bits of research information, including objection to two phrases: "Little old bird dog, that's me" (the term "bird dog," referring to one who hunts and finds objects, didn't come into use until circa 1930), and "to take in a water cooler around the bend in the corridor" (the modern cooler was invented about 1910, though there were can-top coolers earlier). continued

Sometimes De Forest even provides extra, unasked-for bits of information. On Profiles' "Oscar W. Underwood Story," the script simply referred to great shouting and commotion at the 1924 Democratic National Convention. Added De Forest, "The 'official' record indicates specific cries of 'soak it to them, boys, soak it to them.'"

Filters for the mob

Occasionally, to help soothe the savage ulcers of producers, research is offered after the fact. One Untouchables episode called for a man to carefully light a cigaret. The actor hauled out his favorite brand of filter cigarettes, but the Untouchables' days, of course, were also filterless days.

The show was already shot, but De Forest was summoned. He discovered that there was a special filtered type of cigaret for asthmatics available at that time. Result—temporarily assuaged ulcers.

Sometimes the items are trivial, but even there he delights in exactness. For a Twilight Zone he had to find out what day Dec. 30, 2022 falls on. The answer, for those who should live so long, is Friday. Once an I Love Lucy script called for Lucy to grandly purchase fine French burgundy of a particularly fine year. The year mentioned in the script turned out to be a very bad year for burgundy. De Forest picked a good one.

Now and then something is caught almost by accident. There was a Rogues script in which a lovely young thing says to a gentleman who has asked her name, "Just call me Randy." Sounds innocent enough, but one of De Forest's staff happens to have an English background and knew that in England "randy" is a gamy slang expression not generally used in public. The Rogues is a highly popular show in Great Britain, so the line was changed to "Just call me Candy."

Far from being in a dull occupation, De Forest and his staff of three young women insist that the endless variety of problems makes the job "always different and interesting." Not long ago they ran headlong into a publishing company's public-image problems. A Kentucky Jones show called for the boy to read several lines from an elementary school primer, the "Look, look. See Spot. See Spot run" type. In confirming use of the lines, De Forest received a curt note from the publishing company saying that those lines were not from the most recent, revised edition, and would they please use the newest book. Not finding one locally, De Forest had to order one from a San Francisco book depot. Result, though it's likely few viewers would have noticed, was the stirring lines: "This is a cow. A cow is bigger than a dog and smaller than an elephant." And a happy publishing company, a happy Kentucky Jones producer and a happy De Forest.

'Just ask me'

"We've never given up on anything yet," he smiles shyly. "Sometimes we get individual writers who have ideas for a series, and want it researched before they go ahead and write it. We had an architectural designer for Pacific Ocean Park [an amusement-pier development in Santa Monica, Cal.] who had us designing various settings, like the ride through an authentic banana plantation. We'll try anything. Want to know whether the wife of the fifth vice president of the U.S. liked brandy? Just ask me . . ." smiles De Forest. Then he excuses himself and turns back to his desk. "Forgive me," he apologizes. "It's only a few minutes' work here, but they want it right away. They have it a bit wrong. It's a four-line explanation of Albert Einstein's basic theory of relativity."

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Chancellor's Appointment: President Johnson last week named NBC's White House correspondent, John Chancellor, 38, to head the Voice of America. As director of the Government's overseas radio broadcasts, the one-time copy boy for the Chicago Sun-Times will be in charge of a worldwide operation that broadcasts 800 hours a week of news and features in 37 languages. In accepting the $24,500-a-year post—a move reminiscent of Ed Murrow's appointment as Head of United States Information Agency in 1961—Chancellor admitted he is taking a cut in income. Previous to his commentator post, he had been Hugh Downs' predecessor as anchor man of NBC's daily morning Today show, and during his 15 years with NBC news, the award-winning correspondent had served in such world centers as Vienna, Rome, Paris, London and Moscow. Said President Johnson: "I am satisfied that the Voice of America will be in imaginative, competent, reliable and always truthful hands."

On to Siberia!: Having successfully captured "The Kremlin," NBC revealed last week that it had obtained permission to pierce further into Soviet territory. In September a production crew headed by George Vicas, who also produced "The Kremlin," will go 3000 miles into Siberia to Irkutsk to film a one-hour color documentary entitled "Twenty-four Hours in a Siberian City." The program will be the first definitive TV study, outside the Soviet Union, on what is happening in Siberia.

Testing . . . Just Testing: In the light of CBS's success with its "National Drivers' Test" show on May 24, nobody on Madison Avenue was too startled last week when NBC said it, too, would take a hand in this new game of viewer self-examination.

NBC will do it in spades. They'll have 5 — count 'em — 5 one-hour mass-testing shows — in the categories of aptitudes and interests, political beliefs, prejudice, observation perception, and reading ability. What's more, there'll even be a sixth program about testing.

CBS, which had already announced that the "National Drivers' Test" (that had drawn half-a-million letters) would be repeated before Labor Day, next day came up with 6 — count 'em — 6 self-involvement test shows of its own for next season. It too would have one on aptitudes — as well as current affairs, health, safety and youth. And to top them off, a new drivers' test just before next Memorial Day.

Israeli Television: Although the little state of Israel has, until now, discouraged efforts to establish a television system ($1000 per set installation, and heavy taxation), it nevertheless has developed an audience of 30,000 set owners who have no choice but to watch stations in the nearby Arab states. On July 23rd thousands tuned in Egypt's Independence Day parade. That did it. The Israeli Cabinet approved the establishment of a TV service within its borders.

BEFORE SEASON STARTS

Before another TV season begins, and the critics begin telling us how stupid the American public is in its choices, I would like to say my little piece. I went to college, my IQ is respectable, and I love good theater, ballet, opera, symphony music and the like. Our home is cluttered to the rafters with good books and we pay outrageous sums for fine records . . . but heaven deliver me from arty TV. The answer lies in concentration. When we see a legitimate play, a movie, an opera, etc., we go to a hushed and darkened theater, where every motion and every line is clear. But what normal, average household in America is ever that quiet for even one half hour at a time?

Shirley W. Smith
Reidsville, N.C.

REASONABLE QUESTION

Why is it that a show about weirdies, The Addams Family, presents the best husband-wife relationship on television? Or have I already answered my own question?

Doris D. Durnan
Trenton, N.J.

JURY'S ON HIS SIDE

I have [admired] Raymond Burr for years, and your article didn't change my view ("Pleading His Own Case," July 24). There's no doubt that now everyone else feels the same way about such a great socially-conscious . . . man!

(Name Withheld)
Phoenix, Ariz.

I always enjoy any bit of news of Ray Burr. However, I do resent your Mr. Whitney's rather patronizing, "Burr is curiously reluctant to acknowledge that it is still Perry who opens the doors to Burr's larger world." I have always been (with a legion of others), first a Ray Burr fan, and, second, a Perry Mason follower.

Norma H. Pybas

ANNOUNCER STRIKES OUT

Referring to Melvin Durslag's discussion of muscle men in sportscasting ("Look Who's Joined the Affluent Society," July 17), I may say that in our neighborhood we are indebted to a baseball graduate for such gems as: "lenth," "Minnezota," "the fastest than we have seen," "as of yet," "between he and the rightfielder."

THE GREATEST . . .

Best cover yet on TV GUIDE's July 17 issue! And great story inside—"McHale's Navy—Italian Style." I'm still laughing!

Joe Hurley
Milford, Conn.

. . . AND THE WORST

Re your McHale's Navy cover. Aren't you ashamed to so demean one of our most sacred traditions!

11:00 5 8 10 12 PRO FOOTBALL

[SPECIAL] The Washington Redskins meet the Philadelphia Eagles in an exhibition game at Hershey (Pa.) Stadium. Jim Gibbons, Pat Summerall and Tom Brookshier report.

Redskins Scouting Report

Last year, the Redskins tied the Eagles for third place in the NFL's Eastern Conference. To finish higher this year, coach Bill McPeak needs another running back to complement 1964 NFL Rookie of the Year Charley Taylor, who was among the League's leading ground gainers last season. Fullback Rick Casares, obtained in trade from the Bears, may be the answer. Otherwise, Redskin hopes rest on rookie backs Tom Urbanik and J. R. Biggs. Sonny Jurgensen figures to retain his job as quarterback.

Eagles Scouting Report

In tying for third place last year, the Eagles won three times as many games as they did in 1963. Coach Joe Kuharich's biggest problem this year is to choose a starting quarterback from among Norm Snead, King Hill and Jack Concannon. The Eagles have a strong backfield, led by Earl Gros, Ollie Matson and Tim Brown. (Live)

13 FRANCE: CONQUEST AND LIBERATION—Documentary

SPECIAL David L. Wolper chronicles the chapter of French history from the days just prior to the Nazi invasion in 1940 to the Allies' liberation in 1944. French and German films show how the Germans outflanked France's "magnificent" Maginot Line. The fall of Paris and of the French government swiftly followed. Narrator Richard Basehart tells how Southern France was temporarily allowed to remain unoccupied, under the Pétain-Laval puppet regime. But many Frenchmen, unwilling to collaborate, looked to a leader who called for resistance—Charles de Gaulle. Films also cover the Allied invasion in Normandy, the underground's battle to free Paris as the Allies approached, and de Gaulle's triumphant return. (60 min.)

'REUNIFICATION OF MANKIND'

Last February, on the campus of New College, Sarasota, Fla., historians Arnold J. Toynbee and William H. McNeill discussed the role of religion in the reunification of mankind—a topic as deep as it is broad.

The question: "Can religion help man adjust to rapid and profound social, political and technological change?" The two professors draw upon examples from history, trends of the present and the possibilities of the future in considering the questions of greater inter-faith cooperation, a single world religion, and religious compatibility leading to social and political reunification.

Also participating are students and Dr. George Curry, moderator.

Dr. Toynbee, one of England's most important and controversial historians, is best known for his "A Study of History." In this 11-volume examination of the "growth, development and decay" of 26 civilizations, Toynbee is concerned with the decline in religious belief, which he considers a powerful force in shaping man's responses to human and environmental challenges.

McNeill, chairman of the history department of the University of Chicago, is the author of "The Rise of the West."

Produced by Ted Holmes.

"The Ninth of Ab," a drama by Ben Charles, examines the meaning of Tisha B'Av, a Jewish day of fasting observed from sundown yesterday until sundown tomorrow. Set in a contemporary home, the play looks in on members of a family as they discuss the significance of Tisha B'Av. In exploring the changing character of this day—from a period of mourning related to the burning of the first and second temples in Jerusalem to a day for the remembrance of all the dead—the play uses excerpts from the Old Testament, traditional prayers and ancient poems and histories.

SPECIAL The Buffalo Bills meet the Boston Patriots in an exhibition game at Boston College Stadium. Charley Johnson and Paul Christman report.

Last year, the Bills clinched the Eastern Division title by beating the Patriots in the final game of the season, and then went on to win the AFL championship.

Bills Scouting Report

Coach Lou Saban's biggest problem is to fill the hole left by the trade (to Denver) of Cookie Gilchrist, the league's top ground gainer in 1962 and 1964. The top candidate is fullback Billy Joe, who was hampered by foot trouble last season. The Bills hope he'll regain the form that made him Rookie of the Year in 1963. If quarterback Jack Kemp can run the team as well as he did toward the end of last season, the Bills will be favored to win in the East again.

Patriots Scouting Report

The fullback position also poses a problem for the Patriots. Larry Garron filled the slot in past years, but his agility and small size are best suited to a position at halfback. Coach Mike Holovak may have the answer in rookie fullback Jim Nance, the fifth-ranked collegiate ground gainer last year. The Patriots' star passing combination—Babe Parilli to Gino Cappelletti—remains intact.

It makes good sense to arrange for a Homeowner loan to pay all your bills and installment loans. Then, instead of making many big payments each month, you'll have just one lower monthly payment—chances are it will be less than half of what you are now paying, because home loan payments are lower than those available through most any other loan.

8:00 6 9:00 9 MEN OF OUR TIME

SPECIAL Benito Mussolini ("Il Duce") was "a great actor, and the balcony was his stage," according to English historian A. J. P. Taylor, who wrote and narrates tonight's script. From his balcony, the founder of Fascism hypnotized the crowds with grandiose schemes to restore the grandeur of Imperial Rome.

Films and stills trace Mussolini's career: the Fascist black shirts' march on Rome in 1922; and Il Duce (the leader) working in grain fields and at construction sites, strutting and posturing on his balcony-stage, and meeting with Hitler.

Also seen: the Italian military, victorious in Ethiopia and defeated at home; Fascist Party street rallies; German paratroopers rescuing Il Duce from a mountain prison; and his recapture and execution by Italian partisans.

Producer: Patricia Lagone. Adapted by N. E. T. from a production of Granada-TV, England. (60 min.)

Frank Silvera

In a small Mexican village, poverty-stricken Juan Diaz is near death, and his lack of money forces him to make a bargain with Allejandro, the graveyard owner, for a cemetery plot.

Allejandro has a profitable sideline: Tourists pay to visit his mummy-filled catacombs—and a fearful Juan knows what will happen if payments are not kept up on his grave after his death.

Science-fiction writer Ray Bradbury was inspired to write this script after a visit to Guanajuato, Mexico, an area closely resembling the setting of tonight's suspense drama. Producer Norman Lloyd directed this episode, originally telecast last October. Alfred Hitchcock is the host. (R; 60 min.)

8:30 9 CREATIVE PERSON—Joan Littlewood

Malcolm Muggeridge
and
Joan Littlewood

Director Joan Littlewood, one of the major figures in the postwar British theater, is interviewed by critic-humorist Malcolm Muggeridge.

Miss Littlewood discusses her reasons for deciding to leave Great Britain, where she has been associated with the Theater Workshop, an avant-garde repertory company whose plays—notably works by Shelagh Delaney and Brendan Behan—depart from the major traditions of English drama.

Severely criticizing "the old ladies who run our culture," Miss Littlewood discusses the commercial theater of London's West End, which she feels favors plays concerning the upper middle class performed with "Dickensian flourish." She also talks about her own concept of modern drama as an expression of "the wit and genius of the working class and the vitality of the pubs."

'THE SIEGE'

E. G. Marshall and Robert Redford

Alone in his office on a quiet autumn evening, Lawrence Preston is confronted by a man wielding a gun. The intruder is Gary Degan, a former client who was sentenced to life imprisonment on a murder charge seven years ago.

Degan, who has escaped from prison, is a desperate man. He insists that he is innocent and that Preston was responsible for the conviction. After reminding Preston that "killing you isn't going to cost me a thing," Degan is stunned to learn that his former counsel doesn't remember the facts of the case.

'the Liberace of the trumpet'

TURN PAGE FOR STORY

By Neil Hickey

Anybody who thinks he can get a rise out of Al Hirt by shaking a finger under the massive trumpeter's chin and shouting "Faker!" has another think coming. And any jazz purist who attempts to goad Hirt to wrath with cries of "Miles Davis!" and "Dizzy Gillespie!"—thereby invoking the names of authentic jazz heroes—is inviting terrible disappointment.

Recently, an interviewer—all right, this interviewer—came to a meeting with Hirt equipped with sure-fire denunciatory ammunition: He was no jazzman, we planned to say; he was a theatrical curiosity masquerading as a jazz artist; he was totally lacking in inventiveness on the trumpet, a deficiency only barely masked by his dazzling technical virtuosity; he was a set-piece orator among nimble-minded debaters; he was the Liberator of the trumpet, with a beard instead of sequins, a belly instead of candelabra.

He's not a jazzman

Well, a fat lot of good it did us. Hirt—the only man ventripotent enough to fill Jackie Gleason's trousers—is spelling The Great One on CBS for 13 weeks this summer in a variety show called Fanfare. Hirt leaned back on a sofa in his New York hotel suite, took a drag on a Picayune cigaret—a potent New Orleans variety—and declared: "It's all true. I don't consider myself a jazz player at all. I'm not out of the Dixieland tradition. I'm commercial."

Whammy! There went our story, right out the window. But Hirt showed no mercy. "That jazz tag has been put on me. I never asked for it. I don't qualify. I'm in my own bag. Dizzy and Miles are very inventive, but I'm not. I can fall into patterns. I can ape Dizzy's style, but I couldn't originate music the way he does. I improvise at times, but in standard ways. Some jazz artists are so great it's unbelievable, but they never get down there with the people, and pull them up to their level. They just say, 'If you don't dig, so long Charlie.'

"I emphasize entertainment," Hirt continued. "It seems to work, so I don't intend to change." It works, all right. His recordings of "Java," "Honey in the Horn" and "Cotton Candy" have sold in the millions. His engagements in Las Vegas, at New York's Basin Street East, and at various auditoria around the U.S. draw fantastic crowds. Ed Sullivan, in response to viewer appeals, has presented Hirt 13 times since 1961.

One of the things that disturb jazz purists most is Hirt's penchant for hopping about the stage during a performance like a demented koala bear: He does a modified frug, he shuffles, jigs, bumps and grinds, and altogether appears to be having far too good a time to be taken seriously as a jazz trumpeter—many of whom are traditionally cool, detached, and even hostile toward their listeners.

Only hours before meeting with Hirt, we had consulted the noted jazz critic and historian Robert Reisner ("The Jazz Titans," "Bird," etc.) to confirm our suspicions about Hirt's relationship to the jazz world. "His music is bumptious, lively, full of happy, extrovertive sounds," Reisner said. "It contains all the elements which many people think add up to jazz, but which don't, really. Jazz is a sad, reflective music—the blues, pathos, suffering. It has a wonderful spirit which triumphs over this sadness, and which isn't just a lark. Hirt's music is elemental; it's outside the complexity of modern jazz. He's easy to get, easy to understand. For what he does, he's fine."

Now here was Hirt, sitting there, barefacedly (well, not quite) admitting everything. What do you do with a man like that, we wondered. But wait a minute! How about the Billboard magazine award which named him the "Favorite Jazz Solo Instrumentalist" among college students? How about Hirt's own promotional booklet, which describes him as "the greatest exponent of jazz and the finest trumpet man of this generation"?

How about that jazz night club (called simply "Al Hirt"), which he owns on Bourbon Street in New Orleans? How about his standard concert program which includes such old jazz stand-bys as "South Rampart Street Parade," "Muskrat Ramble" and "Wolverine Blues"? You can't have it both ways, buddy boy, we declared.

First of all a performer

Hirt dragged once again on his Picayune, dropped the ashes into his massive fist which he had cupped to form an ash tray, and said: "I want people to like me as a performer. If I can please an audience, I've got it half whipped right there. It doesn't bother me that some people say I'm not a jazz player, because I'm not, in spite of that evidence. The main thing is to get people on your side, to win them over, so they don't feel excluded.

"I like to surround myself with great jazz players, however," Hirt continued. "I've been invited to the Newport Jazz Festival a couple of times, but why they'd want me, I don't know. I'm an entertainer. If you think you're going to pay bills by catering to the people who claim to understand Thelonius Monk, forget it. That's the inside group."

The longer you listen to Al Hirt speak in those soft Louisiana accents, the more you realize that here is an uncomplicated, decent man who is truly "in his own bag" and who is, in fact, surprised over and more than a little grateful for the public acclaim which has come to him so late in his career. As little as four years ago, scarcely anyone knew of him.

He's best defined in his nonprofessional aspects: father of eight children (21 to 5 years old); grandfather of one; married to his high school sweetheart for the last 23 years; a hometown New Orleans boy who never left home (he continues to live there, in a rambling 15-room French Indies-style house on the shores of Lake Pontchartrain, and commutes to New York for Fanfare); the product of German-French Louisiana stock whose roots go deep into the Old South.

Oddly, he is passing up a great deal of money in concert bookings to undertake the TV series, which is being produced on a limited summer-time budget by Sullivan Productions—the first such independent venture to be undertaken by Ed Sullivan and his son-in-law associate, Bob Precht.

But there's a method to Hirt's altruism. "If this show does well during the summer," he told us, "Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Precht will press to have it renewed on CBS as a regular-season prime-time entry with a big budget—perhaps next January, after the weak shows have dropped out. We'll be waiting around like vultures looking for a spot."

Doesn't want to leave home

If that happened, Hirt would want to originate the show in New Orleans and thus never have to leave home again. He'd have beaten the world at its own game and would be rich enough to call off the "elopement drills" which he claims he conducts regularly with his five unmarried daughters.

We asked Ed Sullivan about all this, and got the opinion that Hirt is "the most truly colorful figure in TV. He's always reminded me of a cross between Ernest Hemingway and the Jolly Green Giant. It's an event whenever he shows up. Kids love him. He's a symbol of everything warm and jovial and nice. It's taken Al a long time to get where he is, but he's really captain of the river boat now."

Hirt began playing trumpet when he was 6, and won a scholarship to the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music in 1940. World War II interrupted that, and he entered the Army in 1942, a short time before marrying pretty Mary Patureau, daughter of his high school algebra teacher.

After discharge, he played trumpet with some of the big-name bands—Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, Ray McKinley, Tony Pastor, Horace Heidt. "But that was the end of the big-band era," Hirt remembers. "They were all doing one-night stands, and it was just too much travel for me." So Hirt butted out and went home to New Orleans, where he kept his burgeoning family fed by taking odd musical—and nonmusical—jobs.

Among the latter was a hitch as a pest-control salesman, during which he met the owner of a local night club, the Pier 600—the same club he now owns. Hirt began playing at the club on weekends, and later full time with his own group. His first big booking outside New Orleans was at the Palmer House in Chicago, but the engagement failed to trigger other job offers, and Hirt returned to New Orleans disappointed.

Finally, in November 1960, he played at the Dunes Hotel in Las Vegas and this time was a solid success. Within another year he had a major recording contract and was in constant demand as a TV guest artist. When Ed Sullivan decided to expand his TV production activities, Hirt was the choice to handle the first venture.

Bob Precht, the show's executive producer, says: "This is a long-range project. The show has far greater potential than simply as a summer time-filler. Al, in effect, is auditioning during this 13-week period, and if the acceptance is good, we might get a regular spot next January."

Of Hirt, Precht says: "Al is the first and only real grass-roots personality I've seen on TV. He's from the guts of the country. When we were trying to come up with a sign-off line for the show—along the lines of Garry Moore's 'Be very kind to each other'—it was Al who made the suggestion: 'Stay happy, keep well, and take good care of your family.' It's that kind of sincerity which is going to win audiences for this show."

Presumably, those audiences consist more of grass-roots enthusiasts rather than "cool" jazz buffs. But even Down Beat magazine, the leading jazz journal, takes an essentially kindly view of Hirt. While insisting that "his showbusyness can be deplorably distracting," and while complaining about his onstage jiggling and the "pat music," Down Beat added: "It's difficult to excuse any of that, but it's not difficult to be in favor of this giant of a man who is thoroughly capable of transmitting that power and glory into the jazz trumpet."

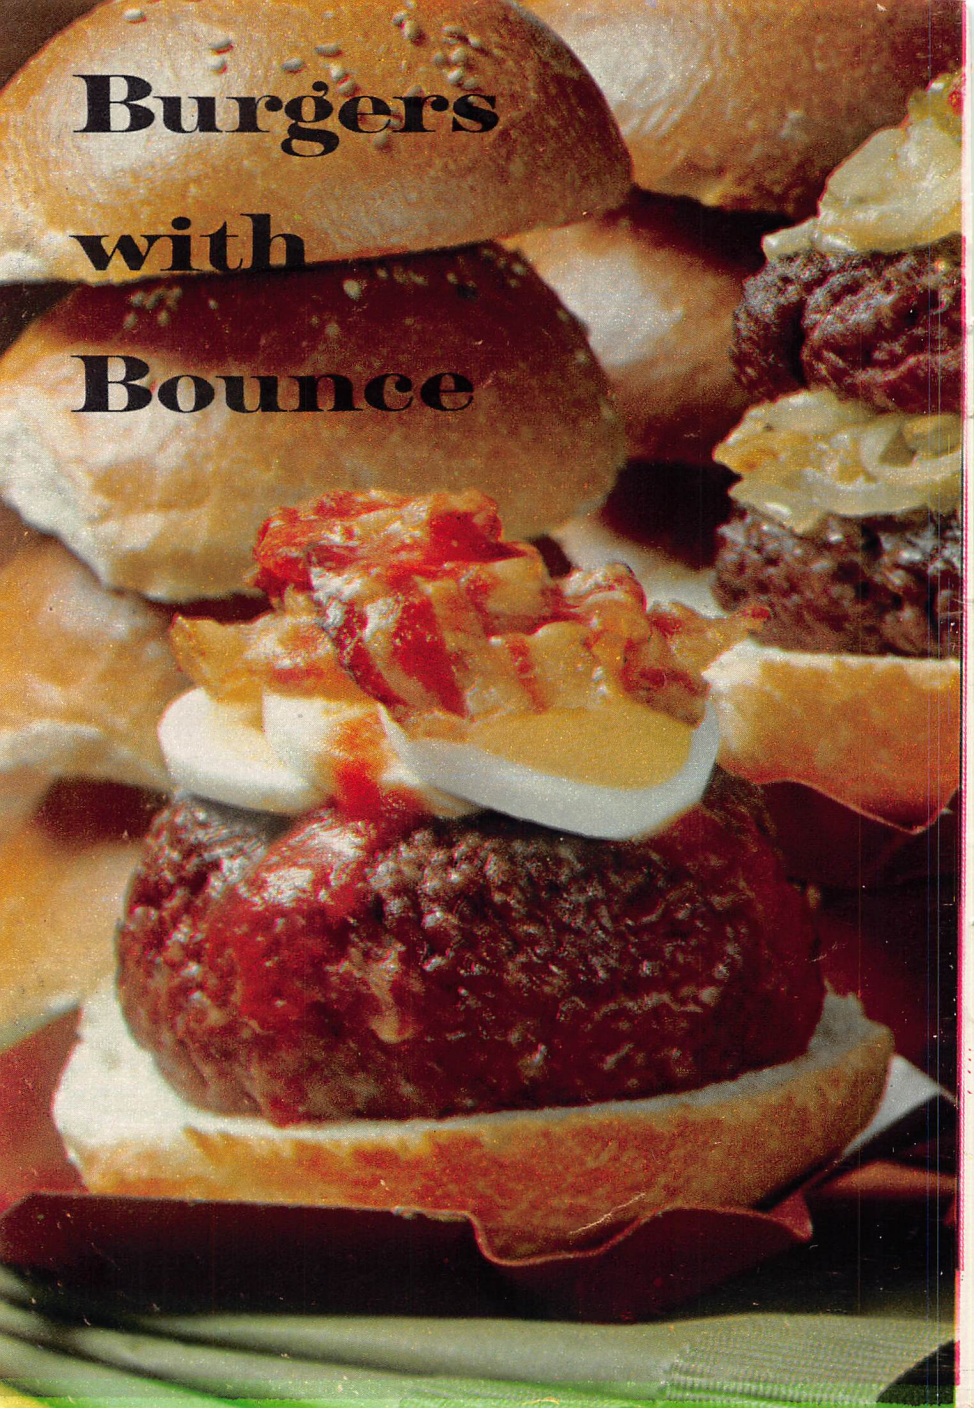

That's the way it is with this New Orleans boy who never left home.

Burgers with Bounce

TURN PAGE FOR RECIPES

Now, the "same old hamburgers" can be given added sparkle with a tastier hamburger mixture, crispy garlic buns and an assortment of flavorful toppings. Set out the portable TV, all the fixin's and let everyone make his own combinations.

BARBECUE BURGERS Makes 8 hamburgers

|------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| 2 lbs. ground beef chuck | 2 slices bread, soaked in water, |
| 1 large onion, chopped | squeezed dry and crumbled |
| 1/2 cup chopped green pepper | 2 tsp. salt |
| 1 egg | 1/4 tsp. ground black pepper |
| 1/2 cup chili sauce | 1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce |

Combine all ingredients, blend well. Shape into 8 patties. Broil in broiler or over gray charcoal coals 6 inches from heat, 5 to 8 minutes each side. Place on toasted garlic buns and add a favorite topping.

TOPPINGS Each topping is enough for 4 hamburgers

1. French Burgers—Mix 1/2 cup commercial sour cream with a 1 1/4-ounce package Roquefort cheese, crumbled. Spoon mixture on hot burger and top with a sprig of fresh dill and a slice of pickle.
2. Bermuda Burgers—Sauté 2 large, peeled, sliced Bermuda onions in 1/4 cup hot butter or margarine until golden and tender. Cook 2 thin hamburgers instead of one thick one and spoon onions between. Top with more onions and pickle relish.
3. Italian Burgers—Top each cooked burger with a few wedges of tomato and a slice of mozzarella cheese. Broil until cheese is melted and bubbly. Top with chopped scallions and parsley.
4. Bacony Egg Burgers—Put a few slices of hard-cooked egg on each cooked burger. Put a strip of crisp bacon on egg and top with catsup.
5. Cole Slaw Burgers—Top each burger with cole slaw and radish slices.

GARLIC BUNS Makes 8 buns

|-----------------------------|------------------------------------|
| 8 hamburger buns or other | 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine |
| round plain or seeded rolls | 1/4 tsp. garlic powder |

Split buns. Mix butter with garlic powder and brush cut surfaces of buns with mixture. Turn buttered surfaces toward the source of heat and broil until buns are crusty and toasted.—Helen Feingold; photo by Midori

Lucy stands triumphantly before one of her conquests, the Kremlin.

MADISON AVENUE'S MISS MACHIAVELLI

Lucy Jarvis has learned that flattery will get her practically anywhere

For two seasons in a row, NBC has amazed the Nation and itself by pulling off documentary scoops of impressive magnitude. The network's cameras have penetrated two citadels heretofore impenetrable for foreign TV cameras: the Kremlin and the Louvre. Both shows—named after the respective citadels—have won awards, not only on the grounds of their artistic and technical merits, but because they existed at all.

How were these scoops achieved? The answer, according to NBC producer Lucy Jarvis, who pulled off both coups, lies in the ancient art of manipulation. An attractive, voluble matron who is known to some as a "great handler of people" and to others as a "Madison Avenue Machiavelli," Lucy Jarvis announces to all who care to listen that it is her talent as a charming con woman which accounts for her scoops. "I flatter people," she says. "You know, there's a Giraudoux play in which one character advises another to look a man in the eyes and say with feeling, 'How handsome you are.' That's the crux of it. You can say it to a man who's as ugly as sin, pimply, dwarfed. But in his heart of hearts he feels he's special. He feels you've discovered him. Flattery is the key."

Sheer manipulative wile, says Lucy, opened up the Kremlin to NBC cameras. She had been sent there in June 1962 to negotiate with the complex Soviet bureaucracy for permission to do the show. "I carried this method to extremes in Russia," she says. "For instance, I took a refresher course in Russian before I left home." For two months, in one way or another, Lucy told the assorted commissars of culture and art how "handsome" they were. She charmed Russian technicians by distributing U.S. cigarettes and homemade brownies. She impressed bureaucratic underlings by a mad name-dropping of big shots in the Russian hierarchy and by rattling off their private phone numbers—gleaned from her days as producer of The Nation's Future on which Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexei Adzhubei, then editor of Izvestia, had appeared. Finally she learned Khrushchev would be at a certain party:

"I wangled an invitation," she told one reporter. "I dressed to the teeth. And I floated into that reception on a pink chiffon cloud. I drifted right over to Khrushchev and I started my pitch. I talked with my eyes, my fingers, my arms and both my feet. I talked and talked about what a wonderful thing it would be for the world to see inside this glorious complex, the Kremlin. Every time I'd stop for breath Khrushchev, fascinated, would correct my grammar. When I finished the pitch he just said, 'It's a wonderful idea. I'll arrange it for you.'" And it was arranged.

Con-womanship, again, got her into the Louvre, says Lucy. She met Harry Abrams, publisher of art books, at a dinner party, and coaxed him into writing to Germain Bazin, chief curator of the Louvre, requesting that "I be given a VIP tour when I arrive there." She cased Mr. Bazin before arrival, learned from French friends that Mme. Bazin loved English tea—and arrived in Paris with a big tin of it. "Mme. Bazin loved it, so naturally her husband was in the position of being grateful."

This calculated dose of tea and sympathy resulted in introductions to Jean Chatelain, director of French Museums, who in turn introduced Lucy to André Malraux, Minister of Culture. To these august gentlemen, Lucy gushed: "Can you imagine how exciting it would be to bring all the beauty and the splendor of the Louvre to the people of America!" The French officials, who had once allowed a cameraman into the Louvre with the harrowing result of seeing a Rembrandt blistered by hot lights, were wary. But technical reassurances, applications of the "You're so handsome" technique and more name-dropping—"If Premier Khrushchev trusted me, why can't you?"—worked.

(Although it somewhat spoils the purity of this story of powerful governments capitulating before the stunning impact of name-dropping, pink chiffon, and food parcels, it must be admitted that the French and Russian governments had their own reasons for displaying their art treasures to the American public. Indeed, Khrushchev considered the propaganda so valuable that he allowed filming to continue throughout the height of the Cuban crisis.)

all those who have seen them know, they were memorable experiences. "The Kremlin," directed and produced by NBC's George Vicas (Lucy's title was associate producer), was widely hailed by the press as one of TV's most outstanding documentary achievements—a visual history of Russia told through the Kremlin.

"The Louvre" was produced by Lucy herself. It too offers a view of history as embodied by this home of so many French kings and queens. It received both awards and lyrical praise, although it was severely criticized for its handling of the arts in the Louvre. "The paintings and statues were . . . seen fitfully in no pattern of meaning . . ." wrote the Saturday Review.

Lucy, herself, still glowing from a Peabody Award, is enormously proud of her coverage of the Louvre: "It gave you the whole sense of values that the kings and the queens put on the esthetic part of life. We made history come alive."

One of the few women producers in network television, Lucy Jarvis is an ex-domestic-science specialist, wife of an attorney, mother of two college-age children, who moved into TV some years ago. She joined NBC in 1960, served as "coordinator of community relations" for NBC's creative projects, produced The Nation's Future, worked on White Papers and now produces "specials."

"I may sound egocentric," says Lucy, "but I have very firm principles about what makes a good producer. You have to know how to cut out what is bad. When I see something bad I get such a feeling in the pit of my stomach." She prides herself on being a good "hatchet man": "It's impossible to be the hatchet man of your own work. The writer is in love with the sound of his own words. In 'The Louvre' I kept cutting Sidney Carroll's text. I thought he'd murder me! And the same with Norman Dello Joio's music. I put a hunk of his 18th-century music into a part requiring 16th-century music. I wasn't encumbered by his musical acumen and intellectuality. He was absolutely screaming. 'It's bastardization!' Well, I found it flowed much better."

Lucy Jarvis is popular in a good many circles. William R. McAndrew, vice president of NBC News, says of her: "Her sex is no handicap." Jack Gould of the New York Times says fondly, "If innumerable Russian figures succumbed to her whirlwind energies . . . they are only following in the footsteps of many over-awed American TV executives. Tangling with Mrs. Jarvis is not a pastime for novices of any ideology."

'Not everybody loves Lucy'

But this popularity is not universal. As Phyllis Battelle wrote in Cosmopolitan, "Probably not everybody loves Lucy, because when a woman is this successful she does not endear herself to all men." One does hear a certain amount of muttering about her "aggressiveness," her "pushiness," her name-dropping. Says one long-time acquaintance, "She hits you with the 'I told Pierre' and the 'I promised Hubert' stuff until your head reels."

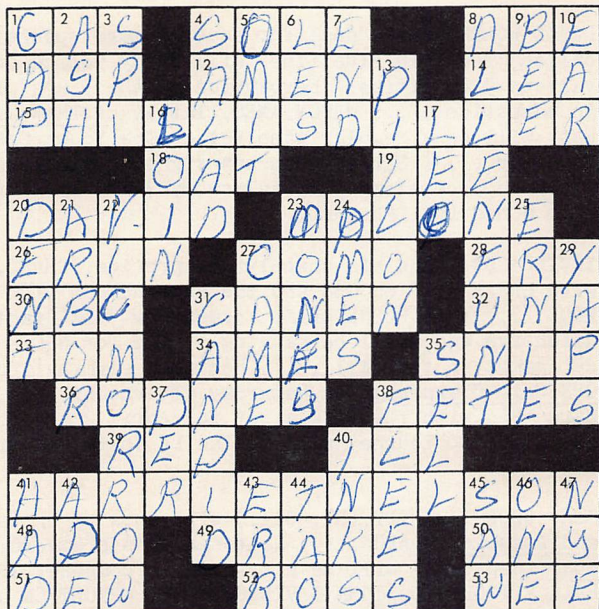

There is some truth to this. Lucy does keep a picture of herself and Vice President Humphrey on her desk. She does like to tell how she cabled Pierre Salinger from Moscow at the height of the Cuban crisis to ask, "Couldn't the President wait till I was through?" And she does like to quote President Kennedy as saying to her on her return, "You were part of the negotiations. We promised to take you out of the Kremlin if they'd take their missiles out of Cuba."

After the Kremlin and the Louvre, what's left for Lucy Jarvis? Her next citadel is internal: She's doing a show on the use of artificial kidneys.

Producer SHELDON LEONARD has hired himself to play a role in one of his I Spy episodes being filmed in Japan. He'll play a villain. Naturally.

TEN YEARS AGO THIS WEEK: An NBC special, "First Step into Space," described America's preparations to launch its first man-made satellite. The satellite was launched in January 1958 . . . It was announced that KIRK DOUGLAS, TYRONE POWER, ETHEL BARRYMORE, LAUREN BACALL and CLAUDETTE COLBERT would aid ailing LORETTA YOUNG with her show . . . PAUL NEWMAN and EVA MARIE SAINT were set to support FRANK SINATRA in NBC's production of "Our Town" . . . And VAUGHN MONROE cooled off a hot August week with "Winter Wonderland," "Cold, Cold Winter," "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" and "Santa Claus Is Coming to Town."

A color photograph of four young adults (two men and two women) on the deck of a sailboat. They are all smiling and holding lit cigarettes. The background shows the white sails and rigging of the sailboat against a clear blue sky. The overall mood is fresh and carefree.

Mild, natural menthol.
Great-tasting tobaccos.
White filter.
